

Poverty Clinic

Sean Mitchell Finney

This is not a wasteland...these are peoples lives. Awake in sheets stained with your lovers blood...a road trip where lifes importance fluctuates between worthwhile and meaningless...a room filled with light bulbs and fluttering moths...life at the top of a staircase, a mouth full of tea leaves. Poverty Clinic is a portrait of strangers as an isolated group of individuals, a mirror reflection of what can sometimes become of the human condition. Hope is midnight. That split second between today and tomorrow when you can almost convince yourself that things are going to change.
