IN 2000, BUTTE, MONTANA corporate powers dismantle and sell its ninety-year-old Fortune 500 BIG SKY POWER COMPANY to allocate funds to their new fiber optic enterprise CONNECT WEST. The venture horrifically fails, and a popular fiber optic company board advisor disappears under dubious circumstances. At the insistence of deputy county attorney Maggie Lester, local law enforcement agencies and the FBI begin an intensive search for the missing advisor. Butte citizens who lost their investments and retirement savings with the companys tumultuous downfall, and the corporate owners and executives all come under suspicion. After a key suspect in the disappearance case is gunned down by a professional shooter, FBI agents Pete Walker and Mary Greens pursuit of the hired killer leads them from Butte to Las Vegas and Phoenix. Meanwhile, FBI Agents Walt Brooke and Darius Dixon investigate wealthy Wall Street investment bankers as instrumental in the murder for hire Montana case. As the investigators charge toward an inevitable confrontation with the hit man and his hidden employer, women most affected by the loss of BIG SKY POWER COMPANY find themselves drawn into the unfolding drama. And, in a nail biting climax, agents Walker and Green line up in the cross hairs of the ruthless hit man.
